1.1 EXTRACT A

[Stephen Kumalo undertakes the journey to Johannesburg.]

It is always so, he said, as if to himself, but in truth to the people.
– I thank you for him, umfundisi.
The train whistled and jerked. Kumalo was nearly thrown off his feet. It would be safer, more dignified to take his seat.
– Stay well, my friend.	5
– Go well, umfundisi.
He went to his seat, and people looked at him with interest and respect, at the man who went so often to Johannesburg. The train gathered way, to creep along the ridges of the hills, to hang over steep valleys, to pass the bracken and the flowers, to enter the darkness of the wattle plantations, past Stainton, down into Ixopo.	10
The journey had begun. And now the fear back again, the fear of the unknown, the fear of the great city where boys were killed crossing the street, the fear of Gertrude's sickness. Deep down the fear for his son. Deep down the fear of a man who lives in a world not made for him, whose own world is slipping away, dying, being destroyed, beyond any recall.	15
Already the knees are weak of the man who a moment since had shown his little vanity, told his little lie, before these respectful people.
The humble man reached in his pocket for his sacred book, and began to read. It was this world alone that was certain.	20

1.2 EXTRACT B

[Stephen Kumalo is alone on the mountain.]

Do tears come into his eyes, and does he wipe them away, and stand up like a man? Does he say, I will not eat any food, I will pray? Is Msimangu there with him, or Father Vincent, or some other priest whose duty it is, to comfort and strengthen him, for he is afraid of the hanging? Does he repent him, or is there only room for his fear? Is there nothing that can be done now, is there not an angel that comes there and cries, This is for God not for man, come child, come with me? He looked out of his clouded eyes at the faint steady lightening in the east. But he calmed himself, and took out the heavy maize cakes and the tea, and put them upon a stone. And he gave thanks, and broke the cakes and ate them, and drank of the tea. Then he gave himself over to deep and earnest prayer, and after each petition he raised his eyes and looked to the east. And the east lightened and lightened, till he knew that the time was not far off. And when he expected it, he rose to his feet and took off his hat and laid it down on the earth, and clasped his hands before him. And while he stood there the sun rose in the east.	5 10 15

[Mr Utterson accompanies the police to investigate the murder of Sir Carew]

This was the home of Henry Jekyll's favourite; of a man who was heir to a quarter of a million sterling.

An ivory-faced and silvery-haired old woman opened the door. She had an evil face, smoothed by hypocrisy; but her manners were excellent. Yes, she said, this was Mr. Hyde's, but he was not at home; he had been in that night very late, but had gone away again in less than an hour; there was nothing strange in that; his habits were very irregular, and he was often absent; for instance, it was nearly two months since she had seen him till yesterday. 5

'Very well then, we wish to see his rooms,' said the lawyer; and when the woman began to declare it was impossible, 'I had better tell you who this person is,' he added. 'This is Inspector Newcomen of Scotland Yard.' 10

A flash of odious joy appeared upon the woman's face. 'Ah!' said she, 'he is in trouble! What has he done?'

Mr Utterson and the inspector exchanged glances. 'He don't seem a very popular character,' observed the latter. 'And now, my good woman, just let me and this gentleman have a look about us.' 15

2.2 EXTRACT D

[Dr Jekyll narrates his strange story.]

I must here speak by theory alone, saying not that which I know, but that which I suppose to be most probable. The evil side of my nature, to which I had now transferred the stamping efficacy, was less robust and less developed than the good which I had just deposed.
Again, in the course of my life, which had been, after all, nine-tenths a life of effort, virtue, and control, it had been much less exercised and much less exhausted. And hence, as I think, it came about that Edward Hyde was so much smaller, slighter, and younger than Henry Jekyll. Even as good shone upon the countenance of the one, evil was written broadly and plainly on the face of the other.	5
Evil besides, (which I must still believe to be the lethal side of man) had left on that body an imprint of deformity and decay. And yet when I looked upon that ugly idol in the glass, I was conscious of no repugnance, rather of a leap of welcome. This too, was myself.	10
It seemed natural and human. In my eyes it bore a livelier image of the spirit, it seemed more express and single, than the imperfect and divided countenance I had been hitherto accustomed to call mine. And in so far I was doubtless right. I have observed that when I bore the semblance of Edward Hyde, none could come near to me at first without a visible misgiving of the flesh.	15

	Sennet sounded. Enter Macbeth, as King; Lady Macbeth, as Queen; Lennox, Ross, Lords and Attendants.
MACBETH:	Here's our chief guest.
LADY M:	If he had been forgotten,
	It had been as a gap in our great feast,	5
	And all-thing unbecoming.
MACBETH:	Tonight we hold a solemn supper, sir,
	And I'll request your presence.
BANQUO:	Let your highness
	Command upon me, to the which my duties	10
	Are with a most indissoluble tie
	For ever knit.
MACBETH:	Ride you this afternoon?
BANQUO:	Ay, my good lord.
MACBETH:	We should have else desired your good advice,	15
	Which still hath been both grave and prosperous,
	In this day's council; but we'll take tomorrow.
	Is't far you ride?
BANQUO:	As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
	'Twixt this and supper. Go not my horse the better,	20
	I must become a borrower of the night
	For a dark hour or twain.
MACBETH:	Fail not our feast.
BANQUO:	My lord, I will not.
MACBETH:	We hear our bloody cousins are bestowed	25
	In England and in Ireland, not confessing
	Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
	With strange invention; but of that tomorrow,
	When therewithal we shall have cause of state
	Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse, adieu,	30
	Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?

[Isabel speaks to Mr M after her visit.]

ISABEL: You're in the location, I'm in the town ... and all the rest of it. So there I was feeling more and more frustrated about it all when along you came with your 'silly little' idea. It's perfect! Do I make sense?

MR M: Most definitely. Make some more.

ISABEL: I've been thinking about it, you see. When I told my Mom and Dad about the debate and what a good time I'd had, I could see they didn't really understand what I was talking about. Specially my Mom. I ended up getting very impatient with her which wasn't very smart of me because the harder I tried to make her understand the more nervous she got. Anyway, I've cooled off now and I realise why she was like that. Being with black people on an equal footing, you know ... as equals, because that is how I ended up feeling with Thami and his friends ... that was something that had never happened to her. She didn't know what I was talking about. And because she knows nothing about it, she's frightened of it.

MR M: You are not.

ISABEL: No. Not any more.

MR M: So you were.

ISABEL: Well, not so much frightened as sort of uncertain. You see, I thought I knew what to expect, but after a few minutes in Number One Classroom I realised I was wrong by a mile.

[Thami shares his feelings.]

THAMI: I don't need to go to university to learn what my people really want is a really strong double-dose of that traditional old Xhosa remedy called 'Inkululeko. Freedom'. So right now I'm not sure what I want to be any more. It's hard, you see, for us 'bright young blacks' to dream about wonderful careers as doctors, or lawyers when we keep waking up in a world which doesn't allow the majority of our people any dreams at all. But to get back to my composition, I did try my best to keep that promise I made in it. For a long time ... Standard Three, Standard Four, Standard Five ... I did work very hard and I did get good marks in all my subjects. This 'most particularly promising pupil' made a lot of teachers very happy. 5

I'm sorry to say but I can't do it any more. I have tried very hard, believe me, but it is not as simple and easy as it used to be to sit behind that desk and listen to the teacher. That little world of the classroom where I used to be happy, where they used to pat me on the head and say: Little Thami, you'll go far ... that little room of wonderful promises, where I used to feel so safe has become a place I don't trust any more. 15

5.1 'A CHIP OF GLASS RUBY'*EXTRACT I

[Late one night in the Bamjee home.]

Jimmy, Pahad's son, appeared at the door with a suitcase; two or three of the girls were behind him. 'Here, Ma, you take my green jersey. I've found your clean blouse.' Bamjee had to keep moving out of their way as they helped their mother to make ready. It was like the preparation for one of the family festivals his wife made such a fuss over; wherever he put himself, they 5 bumped into him. Even the two policemen mumbled, 'Excuse me', and pushed past into the rest of the house to continue their search. They took with them a tome that Nehru had written in prison; it had been bought from a persevering travelling salesman and kept, for years, on the mantelpiece. 'Oh, don't take that, please,' Mrs Bamjee said suddenly, clinging to the arm of the man who 10 had picked it up.
The man held it away from her.
'What does it matter, Ma?'
It was true that no one in the house had ever read it; but she said, 'It's for my children.' 15
'Ma, leave it.' Jimmy, who was squat and plump, looked like a merchant advising a client against a roll of silk she had set her heart on.
She went into the bedroom and got dressed.

AND*5.2 'THE DOLL'S HOUSE'*EXTRACT J

[Isabel tells her friends about the doll's house.]

It was impossible not to laugh. And her little sister, our Else, wore a long white dress, rather like a nightgown, and a pair of little boy's boots. But whatever our Else wore she would have looked strange. She was a tiny wishbone of a child, with cropped hair and enormous solemn eyes—a little white owl. Nobody had ever seen her smile; she scarcely ever spoke. She went through life 5 holding on to Lil, with a piece of Lil's skirt screwed up in her hand. Where Lil went, our Else followed. In the playground, on the road going to and from school, there was Lil marching in front and our Else holding on behind. Only when she wanted anything, or when she was out of breath, our Else gave Lil a tug, a twitch, and Lil stopped and turned round. The Kelveys never failed to 10 understand each other.

Now they hovered at the edge; you couldn't stop them listening. When the little girls turned round and sneered, Lil, as usual, gave her silly, shamefaced smile, but our Else only looked.

And Isabel's voice, so very proud, went on telling. The carpet made a 15 great sensation, but so did the beds with real bedclothes, and the stove with an oven door.

Mid-term break – Seamus Heaney

1 I sat all morning in the college sick bay
 2 Counting bells knelling classes to a close.
 3 At two o'clock our neighbours drove me home.
 4 In the porch I met my father crying –
 5 He had always taken funerals in his stride –
 6 And Big Jim Evans saying it was a hard blow.
 7 The baby cooed and laughed and rocked the pram
 8 When I came in, and I was embarrassed
 9 By old men standing up to shake my hand
 10 And tell me they were 'sorry for my trouble'.
 11 Whispers informed strangers I was the eldest,
 12 Away at school, as my mother held my hand
 13 In hers and coughed out angry tearless sighs.
 14 At ten o'clock the ambulance arrived
 15 With the corpse, stanced and bandaged by the nurses.
 16 Next morning I went up into the room. Snowdrops
 17 And candles soothed the bedside; I saw him
 18 For the first time in six weeks. Paler now,
 19 Wearing a poppy bruise on his left temple,
 20 He lay in the four foot box as in his cot.
 21 No gaudy scars, the bumper knocked him clear.
 22 A four foot box, a foot for every year.

Death – Anonymous

1 One night as I lay on my bed,
 2 And sleep on fleeting foot had fled,
 3 Because, no doubt, my mind was heavy
 4 With concern for my last journey:
 5 I got me up and called for water,
 6 That I might wash, and so feel better,
 7 But before I wet my eyes so dim,
 8 There was Death on the bowl's rim.
 9 I went to church that I might pray,
 10 Thinking sure he'd keep away;
 11 But before I got on to my feet,
 12 There sat Death upon my seat.
 13 To my chamber then I hied,
 14 Thinking sure he'd keep outside;
 15 But though I firmly locked the door,
 16 Death came from underneath the floor.
 17 Then to sea I rowed a boat,
 18 Thinking surely Death can't float;
 19 But before I reached the deep,
 20 Death was captain of the ship.
