SECTION A: COMPREHENSIONQUESTION 1

Read the passage (TEXT A) below and answer the questions that follow.

TEXT ABEWARE OF SOCIAL NETWORKING SITES

- 1 Social networking is widespread. It is common to find people across the world on sites such as Twitter, MySpace, Facebook, YouTube and LinkedIn. They have access to tools and options on social networks that were non-existent previously. Social networking has opened new doors to cybercrime and, because many people on social networks are new to technology, it is more important than ever to make sure they are aware of the risks. 5
- 2 There are many inherent dangers to social networking sites, such as identity theft. Because networking sites are based on the concept of friends sharing bits of personal information, thieves soon realise the opportunity to strike. There are endless social networking scams and so far we have only seen the tip of the iceberg. 10
- 3 Scammers on social networks try to steal your personal information – information that could be used for potential crime. There are websites that have been set up to appear to look like your favourite social networks in order to have access to and steal your password. Having your password means someone can use it to destroy your profile or send out spam messages and viruses, which could do irreparable damage to your online reputation. Sites that require logging on would never ask you to send your password. Instead, forward the message to the network's support or privacy department. 15
- 4 The latest mainstream social network is Twitter. It is based on people following others' status updates or tweets, which consist of 140 characters or less. One of the dangers of social networking sites is that many people want as many followers as possible and are not shy or cautious about what they say in their tweets or updates. This highlights one of the dangers of Twitter and many other networking sites. If the goal for many people is to have the most friends or followers, they might not consider the consequences before they message or add friends. Unfortunately, this sets them up to be victimised by scammers. 20 25
- 5 The biggest social network in the world is Facebook, started by Mark Zuckerberg in 2004. This site has had a sudden rise, becoming a huge software platform that houses every application imaginable and thousands of games and groups. This brings me to another danger of social networking sites. 30

6	Children under the age of 13 should not use the internet without some form of parental supervision. Make sure children do not enter too much private data, such as their home address or school details. Just as it is simple for a young child to fake their age online, it is easy for a potential predator to fake a profile, claiming to be the same age and have the same interests as your child.	35
7	If it is not a predator that could be after a child, it could be someone out to humiliate an innocent person. There have been cases like this and it has devastated some teens. This could result in the teen becoming depressed, or worse, taking his or her life.	40

TEXT C

PLASTIC IS KILLING OUR PLANET –
HERE'S HOW WE CAN CHANGE THINGS

Do you know that every single piece of plastic that has ever been created since the 1800s is still somewhere on our planet? So what can we do to rid the planet of plastic?

If you want people to know how dangerous plastic is for the environment, you need to talk about it to family and friends, people in the community and even government officials. You can also write to the producers of your favourite brand to use biodegradable packaging. When you want to buy toys for a small child, buy a toy that is made of wood, fabric or cardboard, which will not harm the environment.

Instead of buying processed vegetables, rather go for fresh vegetables, which you can buy from the local grocer. Although drinking water from a plastic bottle is very popular these days, a healthier and safer option will be to refill your water each time using a glass bottle.

The next time you go to your favourite supermarket, ask the packer to show you the biodegradable sign on the plastic bag so that you can help save the environment. Save up enough money so you can buy a bag made of fabric in which to pack your groceries when shopping at a store next time. Remember, the effects of plastic will be felt for years to come. So, take action.

[The family goes shopping.]

In the taxi, we all sat in the backseat – the four-seater – and talked excitedly to each other. People we knew sat uncomfortably, silently, in the seats ahead of us. I never did understand what they thought we would do to them. If we were going to poison them with witchcraft, it wouldn't be in a taxi, would it? It was funny to see them trying not to touch our money as they passed it forward to the driver. I could imagine them washing the paranoia off their hands with soap when they got home. 5

At a store I had never been to before, I tried on my new school uniform – a blue dress with a white collar and white trim at the hem of the short sleeves. There were other girls there, White girls, trying on the same uniform. The women who worked at the shop chatted with my aunts about when I would be starting at the White school. 10

[The girls attend a birthday celebration.]

She stepped forward and got me a Slush Puppy, a bag of popcorn and a bar of Kit-Kat. I thanked her and followed them into the movie theatre. I already knew what was on the 'agenda', as KB put it. First the movie, then lunch at a restaurant of our choice and to KB's house for a swim in their pool. I had deliberately left my bathing suit at home and planned to say that I had forgotten it. I was not yet a good swimmer. 5
At lunch, we sat in a booth at Pizza Hut, drinking cooldrinks from large glasses and each enjoying our own pizza. 'Get whatever you want, my dad's paying,' KB had announced when we walked in. I was not saying much, but who noticed? Sumaya hardly stopped to take a breath as she fed us stories of her new private boarding school. 10

MAN:	I am talking of decent dreams ... not the kind of dream you fear.	5
WOMAN:	I have experienced how decent dreams will turn dirty at the bat of an eye. A sweet, handsome man may turn into a raving maniac. No, child, there are no decent dreams.
MAN:	You can dream of the good times ... when Nontobeko was born. It must have been a happy event for you and the old man.	10
WOMAN:	In truth it was. Our first child, Nontobeko. The pains of birth started in the morning when I was weeding our vegetable patch. I was a very strong woman in those days, my child. Even when Nontobeko was kicking in my belly I used to work from sunrise till dusk.	15

[MAN and WOMAN speak about Nontobeko.]

MAN:	An extraordinarily beautiful dream the story of the birth of Nontobeko would be. It would make you forget the indecent dreams you fear so much.
WOMAN:	It is beautiful insofar as it is not a dream. Once it becomes a dream the ugliness creeps in. In a dream instead of having the missis coming to take me to the huis I would have been surrounded by a gang of ogling farm labourers ... watching Nontobeko's struggle to break free from the dark prison of the womb ... laughing their lungs out ... whilst I sleep there ... unconscious.	5 10
MAN:	A beautiful dream still. What is better than having the daughter of the Kaptein welcomed with cheers from a hundred of her father's subjects.
WOMAN:	With jeers, my child. And in a dream you would have been there. My son-in-law watching the birth of his wife.	15
MAN:	Since when do I feature in your dreams?
WOMAN:	I feature in yours.

[Kerneels sits and thinks about the Plymouth]

It was very quiet. Kerneels closed his eyes and folded his arms. Slumped into the seat, he may have slept. For a long time he sat very still. Then he became aware of the sounds of little birds. Further away, the jeering call of a crested lourie. Then the soothing coer-coer of mating bushdoves. At last he opened the door and stood on the crisp sand. He walked slowly around to the front of the Plymouth. He stretched out his right hand and stroked the mascot with the ship in it. There was something of a farewell in the gesture. 5
'Plymouth,' he said contemplatively. 'Plymouth Brethren.'
Plymouth Rock. A good car. Good people. Good chickens. 'But I know now, not good for me, Plymouth. A good car for Corrie. Next week it will be 10 Christmas.'

TEXT M

[The boy goes for a walk.]

The cubs were very thirsty and intermittently sucked at their own little paws and the bodies of one another. By the third day they had become lethargic, and were just lying there, breathing shallowly. Another three days went by. About midday the boy stood up and went out. Taboets was still busy with the cows. He would go and kill those cubs now; his mother could not afford any 5 more losses. He would be strong. They were only vermin after all. This was their farm and he would farm it properly. His mind made up, he skipped over a stone and ran down the footpath. He stopped at the hollow where he had found the cubs. They were not there. 10 So that sly fox had taken them away. Ha, we shall see, Jackal. He walked towards the trap.

[Oom Schalk thinks about the leopard.]

The leopard began to take up a lot of my thoughts. And there was no man to whom I could talk about it who would be able to help me in any way. Even now, as I am telling you this story, I am expecting you to wink at me, as Krisjan Lemmer did.

Still, I can only tell you the things that happened as I saw them, and what the rest was about only Africa knows. 5

It was some time before I again walked along the path that leads through the bush to where the withaaks are. But I didn't lie down on the grass again. Because, when I reached the place, I found that the leopard had got there before me. He was lying on the same spot, half-curved up in the withaak's shade, and his fore-paws were folded as a dog's are, sometimes. But he lay very still. 10

SONG OF THE UNEMPLOYED – Andries Walter Oliphant

1 This room with its brooding coal stove
 2 And aluminium pots, unnerves me.
 3 The broom standing in the corner.
 4 And the black coat hanging from the wall.
 5 What's in the cupboard below the window?
 6 I stand in the doorway or look from the window
 7 And see a grey dustbin
 8 At the hingeless gate.
 9 An aloe with spear-shaped leaves
 10 Catches my eye:
 11 What does it want to say?
 12 Later today, I will take a plastic bucket
 13 And fetch water
 14 From a tap down the street.
 15 I will step around puddles.
 16 And avoid hungry-long dogs.
 17 Where do all the emaciated animals come from?
 19 At dusk, when the first trains pull up,
 20 I will stoke the fire,

10.2 Read the poem below and then answer the questions.

WHERE IS THE FREEDOM FOR WHICH WE DIED? – Chris 'Zithule' Mann

1 Whenever I dream during these violent times
2 I meet up with the martyrs for freedom
3 I see Steve Biko again,
4 and Achmat Timol,
5 and David Webster,
6 all, all of them murdered by deeds of hatred.
7 I also see Nelson Mandela,
8 a man buried alive in prison
9 who stepped from his tomb still living
10 and is the Lazarus of our times.
11 These are the heroes I think of often,
12 who knock at the door of our memory,
13 who travel around our country
14 talking together as they look about them
15 like ancestral spirits of the new South Africa.
16 Going into the home of a drunkard
17 they see him beating his wife and children.
18 'Look at that!' says one of the heroes,
19 'Is this the freedom we fought for?'
20 Entering a township
21 they find the skies full of flames
22 and people running confusedly round the streets
23 like termites whose home has been kicked over.
24 'And look at that!' says another of the heroes,
25 'Is this the freedom for which we died?'
26 Going into a school
27 they see the pupils bickering with the teachers
28 and two boys stabbing each other.
29 'And look at that!' says another of the heroes,
30 'Is this the freedom for which we died?'
31 Walking the city streets at night
32 they find the homes locked and barred
33 as if the people had built their own prisons
34 and lived inside them huddled in fear.
35 'I can't believe it!' another of them says,
36 'Is this the freedom for which we died?'
37 These are the heroes I think of often,
38 these are the shades of the new South Africa,
39 and this is the question they ask of the living,
40 'Where is the freedom for which we died?'

- 10.2.1 Name TWO of the heroes the speaker often thinks of? (2)
